SUPPORTING EDUCATION IN THE MIDDLE EAST

What we achieve with your support

Access to quality education

Successful project with government school to be repeated in other schools by ministry of education.

Struggling families able to keep daughters in education and girls' ambitions increase.

Community based approach strengthens local commitment to early years education and provides transferable model.

Women able to take the initiative, contribute to communities and inspire others to do same.

National qualifications improve employment and higher education prospects

Volunteer experiences develop leadership skill and improve employment chances on graduating.

Successful females act as role models and change agents [in families and communities]

HE scholarships target gap in provision - very little financial support for under-graduate study.

UK raised funding acts as lever to encourage families to let their daughters participate.

Success outside home increases confidence and status and ability to influence.

Girls employment prospects greatly increased and links with local employers established.

Programmes for unqualified helpers provide a first step towards paid work for some mothers.

Training for mothers develops understanding of importance of early learning in kindergarten and at home

Teaching and learning materials develop children's concentration and learning through imaginative play

Refurbished environments stimulate active learning

Expert training for teachers improves quality of teaching

Provision of science equipment gives more girls access to practical science lessons and may increase female take-up of science curriculum options.

Provision of computer equipment enables teachers to use IT across the curriculum, and pupils to access a wide range of learning materials.

Two-year scholarships for able but disadvantaged girls enable them to complete secondary school leaving qualification.

Vocational courses enable girls from traditional and marginalised communities to gain up to date skills and a nationally certified diploma.

On-course placements provide workplace experience

Terms of scholarships encourage volunteering which broadens the students' experience.

Higher Education Scholarships to cover fees allow able girls from poor families to study at university and gain a degree.
